SEASICK CHARGER CAUSES TROUBLE

Two seasick horses, taken from the D. caused some worry and much work for the civilian contractors who were entrusted with the job of getting them to the Q. M. corral this morning. One of the horses was so dreadfully sick that he evidently had no desire to use worse than to die as quickly and painlessly as possible.

As the steeds plodded on foot, a big truck drawn four miles was sent after them. They were loaded in and started on their way; but the stoker one could not even stand the jolting of the wagon. He gave one despairing look at his companion and then collapsed into the bottom of the dray.

The round horse tried to keep off his prostrate companion, but his front legs gave way and there were two horses on the floor of the dray. One of them could not move unless his companion got out of the way, and the other would not have moved for a whole ton of oats. Finally the mule was straightened out and the seasick charger was conveyed in safety to the corral.

The work of forming the Hawaiian exhibit for the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exhibition is progressing rapidly. Loyd Childs, who has charge of the undertaking, is making good headway and will have everything in readiness in plenty of time.

One of the features of the exhibit will be the display of moving pictures by Bonine. Several pictures of extraordinary interest are being prepared and they will form one of the most interesting attractions of the exposition undoubtedly.

The witness is simply trifling with the Court," said Peters, finally, when Lucas had declined to answer one of his questions relative to the approximate cost of the work which had been done so far on the camp.

"I don't like to be insulted," retorted Lucas, either by Mr. Peters or anyone else."

Chief Clerk Manuel Cook of the Public Works Department was called to show the hunting permit which had been issued for the erection of the building in question. It was shown by this that the permit allowed the construction of the structure on the corner of Kuan and Pitkin streets, and it was shown by William Fennell, who was called next, that there was already a building on this corner, and that the new structure was being erected back of it. It was further shown that the permit was not made out to any person, the space for the name of the grantee having been left blank.

The arrival of the noon hour interrupted the proceedings and the case was continued until next Monday.

George C. Beckley exposed R. H. Trent today in his speech from a soap box at the corner of King and Aloha streets. Beckley was angry and was not pleased to be spoken of in such a manner.

Beckley, referring to Trent's speech which appeared in the Advertiser, in which Trent said that he would rather be defeated by a gentleman like Mr. von Holt, said that he (Beckley) was no scoundrel, but that he was not born of independent means. That he was born and raised here and was a son of the soil.

He then accused Trent of depositing the County funds in his employer's name in the bank. Without offering the details of Trent's work as a County treasurer, he said that he was ready to fill the office of County treasurer; that he was prepared to stand on his own ground if necessary and that his home was open to every Hawaiian all the time. Referring to von Holt and Trent, he said that they would not invite the Hawaiians to come in and dine with them.
